While it is perceived well by a set of consumers for being a well-built mid-range smartphone with the unique Glyph interface, the company took to social media to spill the beans regarding its Android 13 update.Nothing Phone (1) Android 13 Update TimelineAndroid 13 is official and the Google Pixel devices have already received it. Some OEMs such as OnePlus and Samsung have launched beta programs to test the upcoming updates. However, it looks like the Nothing Phone (1) could not get this update anytime soon.Some users took to social media to ask when the Nothing Phone (1) could get the Android 13 update. After getting a vague answer from Carl Pei, the founder of the company, Nothing released an official statement revealing the possible timeframe of the next big update.Nothing has confirmed that the Android 13 update will not be rolled out for its smartphone until the first half of 2023. This hints that it could take as long as June next year for the update to be rolled out to the Nothing Phone (1).In a statement to Android Authority, the company stated that it is working hard to improve the user experience of the Phone (1) by rolling out regular OS updates. In this regard, the company will roll out the Android 13 update in the first half of 2023. Prior to the release, they will fine-tune the software upgrade with Nothing's hardware.Despite the delay, the Nothing Phone (1) is slated to receive three stable Android updates, which is until Android 15 and four years of bi-monthly security updates. Given the emphasis of the company on the value of clean software and a near-stock Android experience, there is a huge expectation among many who want to access the latest software. But this expectation is diminishing with the company's recent confirmation on the Android 13 update timeframe.Given that the Nothing Phone (1) could get the Android 13 update sometime in the first half of next year, it will coincide with the arrival of the Android 14 announcement. Xiaomi's Mi Smart Band offers compatibility for both Android and iOS devices. Newer Mi Smart Band versions —Mi Smart Band 4, Mi Smart Band 5, and Mi Smart Band 6 — also feature an AMOLED touchscreen for easy access to your health and fitness results. All you need is to keep wearing the Mi Smart Band on your wrist and enable Bluetooth on your phone to keep receiving real-time data. Once paired with your phone, Mi Smart Band also lets you receive message alerts and incoming call notifications. You can additionally control some of your smartphone's features including its music playback directly from the Mi Smart Band.In this article, we are detailing the steps you need to follow to connect Mi Smart Band to your phone. The fitness band can be connected to your Android smartphone or iPhone using the Mi Fit app.Before beginning with the steps you should take to connect Mi Smart Band to your phone, it is important to note that you need to keep Bluetooth enabled on your phone to wirelessly exchange data with Mi Smart Band. Sign in to your existing Mi Fit account. Alternatively, you can create a new account on Mi Fit by tapping the Create an account now button on the app. Once done, you'll see a screen on the Mi Fit app that will ask you to select the device you want to pair. Tap Band there. You need to bring your Mi Smart Band closer to your phone for pairing. Now, the Mi Fit app will ask you to confirm the pair request on your Mi Smart Band. Tap the tick mark icon on your Mi Smart Band to confirm its pairing. Once Mi Smart Band is connected to your phone, you'll need to allow the notification access from your phone's setting to receive real-time alerts on your wrist. You can also go to the Mi Fit app's settings menu to enable or disable features such as incoming call notifications and idle alerts.Orbital, the Gadgets 360 podcast, has a double bill this week: the OnePlus 9 series, and Justice League Snyder Cut (starting at 25:32).
